The appellant sustained injuries while he was travelling in a jeep. When the jeep reached the place of accident it hit against a mudwall and he suffered injuries. He claimed a compensation of Rs.2,00,000/- as he sustained very serious injuries like computed fracture of right fibula and tibia. The compensation awarded by the Tribunal was Rs.80,955/-. He was only 25 years at the time of accident. Only quantum of compensation is disputed. Considering the nature of injuries, age of the applicant and percentage of disability, we are of the opinion that just and reasonable compensation was granted and no interference is required and hence this appeal is dismissed.
